

MORE YACHT RACES TO-DAY. THE PURITAN AND GENESTA PEOPLE TALK OF THE GREAT CONTEST.

Capt Carter Says He Would Like to Mave Another Brush with the Yankee - The Purities to be sold at Public Anction. Inverted brooms were conspicuous against the clear sky above Staten Island yesterday. The gallant sloop that caused their appearance lay at anchor off Stapleton, within half a mile of the defeated cutter. Brooms could have been more appropriately displayed for the Genesta had she won the America's cup, for her name signifies that variously useful household article. The iron sloop Priscilla, against which Mr. J. Beavor-Webb said he would have ered to match the stately cutter, bobbed up and down between the two great yachts. Neither the Puritan nor Priscilla will sail in the race to-day over the triangular outside course for the cups presented by Commodore Bennett for schooners and by Vice-Commodore Douglas for single-stickers. The entries for race are the keel schooners Dauntiess. Oltana, and Fortuna, the centre-board schooner Grayling, the English cutters Genesta, Stranger, and Clara, the American cutters Bedouin. Ileen, and Isis, and the sloops Gracio, Athlon, and Daphne.

Capt. Carter, the Genesta's little, lithe, blackbearded skipper, seemed to feel chipper as sparrow notwithstanding his misfortune. He said he sailed the Genesta for all she was worth. He was sorry that neither of the bigsparred sloops would be in the race to-day. He was not satisfied that the Puritan could beat the Genesta in genuine English weather. If wind had not shifted to the northward.

the wind had not shinted to the northward, hus favoring the Yankes yacht, he believed he cutter would have done better. It was in reaching and not in doad to windward work in a strong wind that the Puritan had demonstrated her superiority. Whether she was bettered that he was better than the Genesta with a strong wind dead ahead had yet to be found out. He would have liked to have had another chance at the Puritan before returning to England. He did not think the Puritan was badly handled in Wednadsy's race. In regard to her failure to jibe and set her spinnaker to port as the Genesta did. Capt. Carter said:

"I suppose they thought that, as they were so near the turning mark, they would have lost just as much in shifting the spinnaker as they lost by letting it remain on the starboard side, and so they decided not to change it.

When asked why the Genesta's working top-sail had been kept aloft in the beat in to Scotiand Lightship, Cant. Carter said he thought that be could carry it without hurt to the cutter's speed. He said he did not blame the Puritan for blanketing his boat as they came in on the flual reach. She could not help it.

Pilot Jones was also of the opinion that the shifting of the wind to the northward materially helped the Puritan. He said:

"I believe the Genesta would have done better with her topmast housed. But Capt. Carter was determined to be beaten with all spars if beaten at all. Har lee decks were under water haif the time, and the resistance of her heavy channels kept her back. If the wind had ballen enough, she would have gained on the Puritan, as the latter would have lost some time in resisting her topmast and gaff topsail. The Genesta is a great boat, and would have bed a walkover if the Priscilla and Puritan never had been built. She can easily beat any other single-masted vessel in America.

"If the Puritan had shifted her shinners, as both yachts would have been a little more wind the Puritan would have frached there would have been a little more wind the Puritan would have fre mat we were going to be besten. On the conterty, we all believed that we would win. The Genesta was splendidly handled, and she made a brave the thir."

Capt. Aubrey Crocker said: "Although all the men were very wet, our experience yesterday was easy compared with what we had in the race over the inside course. There was no experimenting with sails and less labor. We would have beaten the Genesta more if we had slifted our spinnaker when she did. We never had a thought of recing even when it was blowing hardest. We could do without recing longer than the cutter. I think, and with less danger of carrying something away. It is true, as Capt. Carter says, that he would have leed us for a while if the wind had moderated, for we would have been without a torsail to help us along. But we sere pretty certain that the wind would hold, and it did. That was a chance we took in housing our topmast, and the result showed we were justified in taking it. The Genesta's working topsail hur; instead of helping her latthe windward work. We fought the cutter lairly, and beat her fairly. We might have blanketed her in the run out, but we decided to give her fair play, so that notody could just is any that we bent them by Yankee tricks."

Mr. Joseph R. Busk, owner of the sloop Mishief, who was aboard the Puritan's victory was due to the superiority of her build. He thought we mistakes had been made, one in not jibing, and the other in overpointing when on the starbert did not the superiority of her build. He thought we mistakes had been made, one in not jibing, and the other in overpointing when on the starbert did not the superiority of her build. He thought we mistakes had been made, one in not jibing. And the other in overpointing when on the starbert did not one for the superiority of her build, the thought we mistake had been made, one in not jibing. And the other in overpointing when on the starbert we will not, it is said, enter any neces this season. She will be towed to Willington next week for altorations. Mate Ruslands a SINGLE STICKERS.

Among the fleet of cutters surrounding the Genesta yesterday were the Heen and the Stranger. Both were without howsprits, having lost them in the squall on Wednesday that has so disastrous to the big cutter. They will have new nose poles in this morning, and will take part in the Commodores' cup races. The English cutter Clara, the American cutter Isis, and the aloop Athlon will have a private sweepstakes race while contesting for the Douglas cup.

DE MORES'S TRIAL FOR MURDER. The Marquis's Plea to be that the Killing was Done in Self-defence.

BISMARCK, Dak., Sept. 17 .-- In the trial of the Marquis De Mores for the murder of Luffsey, the prosecution on Monday introduced the evidence of a railroad laborer that from a distance of two or three hundred yards he saw De Mores and another man coming from concealment in the brush whence the first shots were fired which dropped Luffsey from his horse. This was corroborated by the deposition of another laborer, now dead, taken by an examining magistrate, which was allowed to be read to the jury. The verdict of the Coroner's jury implicating De Meres was ruled out. The Coroner testified that De Mores, four days after the killing, said to him: "That man fought well, but I had to kill him. I have a wife, and could not afford to take chances. The same witness testified that at the time of the killing officers were coming to arrest O'Donnell and his companions for threatening

The chief witness for the prosecution is Wannegan, who was with Luffsey when he was shot. He testified that no shots were fired by the party of hunters except one by Luffser after he received the fatal wound. Wannegan is a very bad witness for the Marquis. He re-after he received the fatal wound. Wannegan is a very bad witness for the Marquis. He remembers nothing except that which will tend to convict, and forgets nothing that will injure the defendant, Once during the trial the Judge admitted certain questions by counsel for the defence, on the ground that they pointed toward an impeachment of the witness. Wannegan's story would leave the impression that there was no cause for the killing, and that the Marquis is guilty of murder in the first degree. Counsel for the defence objected to the question relative to a certain conversation which Wannegan had with the Marquis, but the Marquis immediately announced in open court that he wanted all facts known, and the question was answered.

The prosecution rested its case yesterday morning, owing to the absence of several witnesses. The defence was opened by one of the counsel for De Mores, in which he said that it is the intention to prove the lawless condition of affairs in Little Missouri (or Medora) at the time Luffsey was killed; that, in consequence of threats and personal danger, De Mores went to Mandan, 150 miles away, the nearest point at which he could find a peace officer, and procured warrants for the arrest of Luffsey and his companions, who were terrorizing the town, and, with others, telegraphed and sent a messenger to hasten the coming of the Sheriff, Luffsey and his associates threatened to resist the Sheriff, and De Mores sent word to that officer to come armed and Dring a posse with him, and that he (De Mores) and others would prevent the men from escaping. The Sheriff arrived in Little Missouri without any heir. Luffsey and his facients defend him, and rode away. De Mores and his party then undertook to arrest them, and were at once fired upon, and returned the fire. Several shots were exchanged before Luffsey fell. Then O'Donneli and Renter (better known as Wannegan) retreated, but were arrested by Paddock, who is indicted with De Mores.

Four witnesses appeared yesterday who teatified to threats made by

WERE MEN IN THE CABIN?

KNOCKING HEARD AFTER THE ED. WIN POST TIPPED OVER.

Earnest Efforts to Raise the Vessel-The Knocking Grows Painter and Stops, On last Christmas Day the English clipper ship Lornty was run into by the steamer Cornwall, and sunk in the ship channel, about midway between Ellis's and Governor's Islands. She had been anchored about haif a mile from the Battery wall, where the currents are swift and strong. No attempt was made to raise her and rescue her cargo of oil until May last, when the Merritt Wrecking Company sent the wrecking schooners Edwin Post, in charge of Capt, Jas. B. Smith, and the Rapidan to the scene of the accident. The crews of both vessels, together with two divers, named Patrick Linden and Anton Anderson, numbered sixteen men. The schooners anchored near the wreck, and the work of raising it went on uninterruptedly. except when the schooners were run into by some incoming or outgoing craft. These collisions happened frequently, and a good lookout was constantly kent on the deck of both schooners. At night the regulation eight-inch light always swung from their stays.

When the mon on board the schooners stopped work on Wednesday night, Anton Anderson, one of the divers, was rowed ashore. All the other men lounged about on the decks un-til 10 o'clock, when everybody left from the deck of the Edwin Post except the watch. Capt. Smith and the colored cook. John Philips, are supposed to have been in the cabin deek of the Edwin Post except the watch. Capt. Smith and the colored cook, John Phillips, are supposed to have been in the cabin. There was a strong cbb tide flowing, and the wind blow strong from the northwest. The harbor was full of sailing vessels at anchor. About 10% o'clock the watch on the deck of the Edwin Post saw a tug steaming down the bay with a long line of barres and canal boats in tow. A second tug canne circling around the boats, keeping them in order. The fleet of boats kept drawing nearer and nearer to the wrecking schooners until the watch on board became alarmed and shouted lustily ffor it to keep off. The tug headed away and safely passed the schooners, as did a number of the boats in tow. The tug had not sheered off scone enough, and the rear end of the tow was swept with crushing force against the schooners. It tore away a portion of the starboard rail and the bowsprit of the Rapidan and then struck the Edwin Post is ted, and before she could right herself one of the boats in tow slid against her and tipped fier over. The hold filled with water and she sank rapidly. The cabin was closed tight, and the air in it kept the vessel from sinking, so that she lay with a portion of her hull above water. Those of the crew who had gone in the forecastle had been alarmed by the cracking of the Rapidan's howsprit, and had scrambled on deck in a jiffy. When the Edwin Post received the first blow a few of the men were knocked overboard, and the others had jumped for the two only to drop into the water and narrowive scaped being crushed to death. All these men were picked up by the men on board the Rapidan.

By 25° o'clock the John Haggerty and Rescue, wrecking of the trailing from the filled schooner about where her cabin was. There was no doubt but that either one or both of the missing men were confined in the cabin, and the colored cook, Phillips, were missing. "Is anybody with you?" the men shouted again. Then they listened intently, but the only thing they heard was several unusually loud raps.

The divers and wreckers, under command of Capt. F. Sharp, worked like beavers. Ordinarily it would take soveral days to set the vessel on her keel again, but the men were determined to keep right at work until they had rescued their imprisoned comrades. Mr. Merritt was on the scene early, and worked as hard as anybody. Two divers were sent down to ascertain the exact position of the schooner. They found that she was in eighteen fathoms of water, and that she was in eighteen fathoms of water, and that she was in eighteen fathoms of water, and that she was in eighteen fathoms of water, and that she look her was clear enough for the passing of chains. The Lornty lay a little to the north, so that she did not materially interfore with the work. The masts of the schooner pointed south. The Rapidan worked up close against her buil, while the John Haggerty was anchored as near on the other side as possible. While this was going on the knocking continued, sometimes rapidly, and then died away as though the arm that caused it was tired. Again it seemed as though haif a dozen men were struggling to break out. Notwithstanding the exertions of the men, it was nearly davlight before they were ready to begin pumping air into the schooner. The knocking had been gradually growing fainter, and seemed to be dying away. At times it was lusty enough to be distinctly hoard, and then it would not be heard again for a long interval.

As the schooner filled with air she slowly rose until nearly the whole length of her side, from stem to stern, could be seen. The work was necessarily slow, and the men were still at it at 6 o'clock. The knocking had not been heard for some time, and the men were becoming discouraged. But they were cheered by the hope that the foul air in the cabin had only caused those confined to fail into a faint or become so weak that the knocking could not be continued. Some of t

The Resident Physician at Mount Holyoke Seminary Takes ber Own Life. SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 17 .- Mount Holyoke

Seminary, at South Hadley Falls, Mass., is in deep grief because of the suicide of Dr. Ade-laide Richardson, resident physician. She ook her life on Tuesday night, while in a fit of insanity, by thrusting a lancet in the carotid artery, on the right side of her neck. Several seminary girls went to the dispensary on Wednesday morning for advice, and, after waiting some time for Dr. Richardson, reported her absence to the teachers. At about noon it was thought beat to force the door of her room, and when this was done she was found on the bed dead. Her friends were notified, and took her body to Waliaston te-day for interment. Brief services were heid at the seminary, but these, and indeed all the particulars of her death, have been shielded from publicity. Dr. Richardson was 47 years old, She was educated at Ann Arbor, Mich. She stayed at Mount Holyoke Seminary from 1878 to 1882, and practised thereafter at her mother's home in Jamaica Plain, Mass., and did some hospital work White traveiling in the South for her health a tendency to insanity was evidenced, and she has been under the care of Dr. Zachschefsky, a Boston specialist. HOW JUMBO WAS KILLED. He Lost his Own Life in Trying to Save that of the Haby Elephant. BUFFALO, Sept. 17 .-- A. Haight, representing Mr. Barnum, arrived here this morning on his way to London, Ont., to join the circus. He said that the truth about the killing of Jumbo on Tuesday evening had not been published. After the show in St. Thomas, Ont., that evening, the driver started down the tracks with Jumbo and the baby elephant. Tom Thumb to where the Grand Trunk freight train wa standing. There are a great many tracks at that point used in the switching of cars on the Grand Trunk air line, which there joins the main stem of the road On one side of the track was the train and on the other was a steep embankment. As the train came around the curve the keeper tried to induce Jumbo to go down the embankment but he would not, for what reason was not at first apparent. The baby elephant was in the

but he would not, for what reason was not at first apparent. The baby elephant was in the rear, and as the train approached Jumbo began to bellow and swing his trunk. The little elephant seemed dazed, but did not get out of the way. As the engine was almost upon them Jumbo raised on his hind legs as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought o protect the baby, and then quick as thought opposite the protect the baby, and then the same and against a freight car twentyly ards away, where he dropped down whining like a puppy with a sore foot. Jumbo, in saving the life of his little protegd, had entirely neglected his own chance to secaps. The locomotive struck him with full force in the side, crowding him against some cars on the siding nearest him and fairly squeezing the life out of him. When they came to the end of the switch the engine of the track, and with it five freight cars that stood on the siding.

Then there was a scene never to be forgotten by those that witnessed it. The mangled beast roared with pain, and the little elephant roared as loud as he could in sympathy. The crush was too heavy to leave any chance of recovery, and the bystanders could only wait for Jumbo's death. It was not long delayed. In three minutes he turned over on his back dead. It was found that the baby elephant had sustained a broken leg, and, as there was no help for him, orders were given that he be put out of his misery, which order was carried into effect/yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Barnum received a telegram from Prof. H. A. Ward of Rochaster University asking for the privilege of skinning the animal, which was granted. Prof. Ward is now engaged in this work. The skeleton will be present it to Tuff's College. The skeleton will be presented to t

THE SILVER OUESTION. Anti-Silver Men Anxious Concerning Speaker

Carlinle's Attitude. WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 .- Advocates of silver colnage repeal are anxious to find out where Speaker Carlisle stands on the question. They foresee that the manner in which the committees of the next House of Representatives are made up will have much to do with the shaping of legislation. Mr. Carlisle's redlection is practically assured. Will he reappoint dollar, to the head of the Committee on Coinage? The anti-silver men say that Mr. Bland's reappointment would be a surrender to the silver men at the very outset.

The Star says that, according to the general custom, the old Chairmen who have served satisfactorily will be reappointed at the heads of their respective committees. Thus Mr. Morrison will expect to go at the head of the Ways and Means, Mr. Randail's friends will claim for him the Appropriations Committee, and Mr. Biand will expect to be placed at the head of the Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee. He will expect also that the committee will be organized according to his ideas, so that the silver men will be in control. Should his expectations be accomplished, the silver men would have the reins in their own hands, and the Administration would be defeated at the outset. On the other hand, if Mr. Carlisis should refuse to place Mr. Bland in his old position, or should organize the committees on as to take the power out of his hands, it would have the tendency to commit the House to the support of the Administration before any vote had been taken.

Representative Warner of Ohio is in the city to-day, having come hore to see Secretary Manning and Treasurer Jordan about his proposed silver compromise bill. Mr. Warner has been consulting with all the prominent silver men he could reach, with the view of strengthening his proposition. The most important persons on both sides of the question are said, however. satisfactorily will be reappointed at the heads proposition. The most important persons on both sides of the question are said, however, to stand in their original position, and the prospects of a compromise are not thought to be good, although Mr. Warner thinks a com-promise measure may be passed.

PRESIDENT DIAZ'S MESSAGE. Recommending the Ratification of Treatles with the United States. CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 17, via Galweston .-

He spoke in general of the excellent relations which Mexico cultivates with all the nations of the world, but with respect to the United States, the President said, we have maintained the most cordial relations. The return of the Democratic party to power after more than twenty years has not occasioned any variation in the political friendship reigning between both countries. For this reason he recommends to the Chamber of Senstors the early ratification of the postal and extradition tors the early ratification of the postal and extradition of criminals treaties which the Mexican Minister in Washington has negotiated with that Government, as well as the approval of the additional article of the commercial convention of Jan. 20, 1883, proragining mill March 20, 1880, the carrying out of article 8 of the said convention and the ratification of the laws which the said convention and the ratification of the laws which the said convention and the ratification of the resty concluded in the city of Washington by the Mexican representative establishing certain rules of interpretation with respect to article 1 of the limit treaty of Dec. 30, 1853, so as to avoid difficulties caused by the constant deviations to which the course of the Rio Bravo is exposed. stant deviations to which the course of the Rio Bravo is exposed.

He said that the unfortunate circumstances in which he public Treasury finds itself obliged him with great regret to decree the laws of June 22. He thanked the employees for accepting without opposition the reduction in their pay. He expressed great natisfaction at the product distribution which is the creditor of Mexico, whom he found well disposed to second the efforts for the public good. He explained that the Banco Nacional had gented the collectorship of the interior and exterior dent of Mexico, and that its consequence of this the diovernment will have at its disposal the necessary funds to that effect. This part of the message indicates the principle of definitive settlement with all the creditors comprehended in the laws of June.

CLEARING UP THE MYSTERY OF THE ENGLEWOOD MURDER.

The Victim was Catharine Fischer, the Wife of a Wentiby New York Grocer's Son-Led to Brink by her Hu-band's Habits. For more than two days the name of the dead woman found on Monday morning near Fort Lee remained a mystery. None of the papers in her alligator skin bag afforded a clue, and twice Undertaker Taylor put off the buria of the unfortunate woman in the hope that she might be identified. On Wednesday night. however, Mr. Joseph S. Ridgway, a lawyer having an office at 357 Fulton street. Brooklyn, and living in Crawford, N. J., went to Englewood, where the body lay, and examined it carefully. At his first sight of the dead woman's face Mr. Ridgway turned to Undertaker Taylor and said: "I know the woman." He then left the undertaker's shop and called on Marshal Jameson. To him he repeated his remark and gave such facts as he was willing should be known, laying a charge of secrecy on the Marshal until the next morning. Mr. Ridgway promised to attend to the funeral, and then returned to his home in Crawford. Mr. Ridgway is the father of James W. Ridgway, District Attorney of Kings county. The name of the dead woman was not disclosed until yesterday afternoon, when Mr. Ridgway, unable to communicate with the woman's family, decided that the reasons for secrecy no longer existed. Her name was Catharine J. Fischer. She had been married, but did not live with her husband, Dedrich H. Fischer, having obtained a limited divorce

Catharine J. Fischer. She had been married, but did not live with hor husband, Dedrich H. Fischer, having obtained a limited divorce from him on the ground of abandonment. Mr. Ridgway had been her lawyer in her suit for divorce. A Sux reporter saw Mr. Ridgway yesterday afternoon.

"Mrs. Fischer was of Irish parentage." he said. "and was born in this city in 1853. She was an intelligent but by no means a handsome woman. Her chief peculiarity was her fashionable dress.

"Her husband, Dedrich H. Fischer, is about as old as she was. He was the son of Otto T. Fischer, who, when he died, some six or seven years ago, was a wholesale grocer doing business at 110 Murray street, New York. The father lived at 519 Greene avenue, Brookiyn. Dedrich Fischer received $75,000 by the terms of his father's will, but by the same instrument Frederick W. Axte was appointed executor, and directed to pay only the income of that amount to the son in fised monthly installments. The will also gave $25,000 to a woman named Lempke, who had been the elder Fischer's housekeeper for several years. Young Fischer tried to have the will set aside on the ground of undue influence on the part of the woman Lempke, but the Surrogate sustained it. I think that the amount of the monthly payment was more than $300. I have heard it placed at $600. Old Mr. Fischer knew his son too well to trust all the fortune in his own hands, for the younger man was greatly addicted to drink.

"The trouble between young Fischer and his wife was strongly opposed to strong drink of any kind, and even on her wedding day refused to drink a glass of wine with her husband. He, however, persisted in drinking in spite of her, At first they lived at 235 Hooper street, and then they went to 58 South Eighth street. I believe this was their last residence in Brooklyn.

"Mrs. Fischer gradually got over her dislike for liquor, and it presently became painfully apparent to her friends that her husband's oxamic had been directly with her, but he was continually heard of, now in Texas,

"While the divorce sult was in progress Mrs. Fischer from time to time came to my office. Sometimes it was evident that she had been drinking, but she was always ladylike in my presence. Her last visit to the office was about two months ago. One of my clerks has seen her since that time in her rooms on Third avenue, near Thirtieth street, New York."

Dedrich Fischer, the divorced husband of the dead woman, left his home on Saturday for a dead woman, left his home on Saturday for a fishing excursion along the shores of Long Island. He had not returned home up to a late hour last evening, and Mr. Ridgway did not know whether or not he was informed of his wife's death. Mrs. Fischer has two sisters, one of whom is married and living in Massachusetts, the other being still unmarried, and residing in this city, it was reported that Mrs. Fischer's maiden name was Lynch, and that she had resided at 40 Lexington avenue. At that house, however, she was not known under either name. A similar ignorance prevailed at both of the houses in Brooklyn mentioned by Mr. Ridgway as being these in which Mr. and Mrs. Fischer once resided.

Brooklyn mentioned by Mr. Ridgway as being those in which Mr. and Mrs. Fischer once resided.

Her unmarried sister is said to be engaged in some sort of literary work, but no trace of her residence could be found. These two sisters, whose names are said respectively to be Mary and Margaret, are her only relatives, as she has no children.

In spite of her love for drink, Mrs. Fischer is said by her friends to have been a virtuous woman. She frequently invited friends to accompany her on excursions, and entertained them at expensive dinners. Mr. Ridgway said that she frequently visited Concy Island and other resorts in the neighborhood of the city, but that unless under the influence of liquor she would never have come into the power of the men by whom she was murdered.

All efforts to find the whoreabouts of John Quinn and John Harrington, whose names were in a memorandum book in the woman's bag, were likewise unavailing.

Mrs. Fischer's movements from Thursday, Sept, 10, when the tiekets in her bag show that she was at Concy Island, to 6's o'check on Sunday evening, when she appeared at Mrs. Haefenin's house, have not been traced. If successful they might go far to throw light on the woman's condition at the time she was first seen in Fort Lee.

DEAD AND ROBBED.

Peter Burks Found Unconscious with All

his Money Cone-His Death. An unconscious man was found in front of 10 Washington street yesterday morning, and taken to the Chambers Street Hospital, and from there transferred to Bellevue, where he died last evening. At 10 P. M. Mrs. Teresa Burke of 438 Haisey street. Brooklyn, ividited the Morgue and recognized the man as her husband, Peter Burke, a butcher. She said that he left home with $300 in his peckets. When taken to Bellevue Hospital he was penniess. The cause of death is not stated on the death card, and cannot be determined except by an autonsy.

Mr. Blaine May Try Again.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.-An Augusta special to the Heraid says "A gentieman, who evidently speaks with authority, was asked whether Mr. Binine would again un for the Freshency. He replied: 'That remains to seem. It is a fact that his political admirers in Main do not acquiesce in the remarks recently uttered by Gov. Long of Massachusetts, and think he was alto-gether too previous in what he said about Mr. Biaine as gether too previous in what he said about Mr. Biaine as a Presidential candidate. It is understood that Mr. Biaine does not consider his strength impaired in consequence of his defeat, which he attributes more to the furchard accident than to anything else. Further than this he is close mouthed. When a candidate is beaten by so close a margin as Mr. Biaine was, and receives the largest vots ever thrown for a minority candidate, it is hardly reasonable to presume that the Presidential be in his bonnet has flown. It is a marked trait in Mr. Blaine's character, whenever his personal aspirations must with a check, to pick his flint and try again. One thing is certain. He is not shelved in American politics."

A MYSTERY AT BAYONNE.

The Bend Body of a Flaxen-haired Young Woman Found Near Newark Bay.

Early yesterday morning a boy named Gus Gordon, who was walking on the beach at the foot of Twenty-fourth street, Bayonne, saw a queer-looking object lying on the shores of Newark Bay out of reach of the water. Approaching, he found that it was the body of a woman. The dress was thrown over the head, and the lower part of the body was clothed only with shoes and stockings.

He summoned the police, who found that it was the dead body of Miss Margaret Aberling, a bright, flaxen-haired Germangiri of 22, who came to this country about a year ago. She was the niece of the President of the Bayonne Board of Commissioners. She had been at work for Mr. J. S. Meyer, a confectioner and baker. On last Wednesday morning she went away, saying that she was going to take a little walk. When last seen she was walking lelaurely down Twenty-seventh street, in the direction of Newark Bay.

When lound yesterday her arms were tightly folded over her breast, and there was a mark that looked like a cut on the face. The body was removed to her uncle's house. County Physician Converse saw it yesterday. He would not say what the cause of death was. Chief of Police Van Buskirk and several discritives were trying to fathom the cause of death all day yesterday. They would not make any statement last night. woman. The dress was thrown over the head,

A NEW POSTMASTER FOR AUGUSTA. The President Finally Deciding on a fined per to Joseph Manley.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 .- The President has appointed Lemusl B. Fowler to be Postmaster at Augusta, Me., vice Joseph Manley. Mr. Fowler is a successful dry goods merchant, and is said to be a man of high character and standing. He is about 50 years of age, and has been n business in Augusta for the last thirty years. He has always been a Democrat, but not an active party worker. He was the candidate of his party for State Representative twice, and his party for State Representative twice, and once for Mayor. He has also been a member of the Board of Aldermen of Augusta. His selection, it is said, is satisfactory to the friends of Coi. Morton, against whose appointment the Maine Senators protested, and the designation was made in accordance with an understanding had between President Cleveland and Mr. Morton and his friends at a recent conference in the Executive Mansion.

The appointment of Mr. Fowler ends the warmest light, perhaps, over a Postmastership that has taken place during the present Administration. Mr. Manley's commission as Postmaster at Augusta expired several months ago. He was a warm friend of Mr. Blaine, who desired his continuance in office. Col. Morton, editor of the Age, was an applicant for the place, and was backed by all the leading Democrats of the State. The President, it is understood, declined to appoint Morton, on the ground that he printed in his[paper scandalous articles reflecting on Mr. Blaine's family life, and particularly as to his marriage.

Workers, Not Blowers, Wanted, but There Must be a Special Train.

The Tammany Hall Committee on Organration was divided last evening on the question whether Tammany ought or ought not to go to Saratoga in a special train with a big band of music and Tom Brennan as Grand Marshal. John F. Carroll reported that the Committee on Transportation had been unable to complete all the arrangements for the trip, owing to the uncertainty as to how many able to complete all the arrangements for the trip, owing to the uncertainty as to how many would go. He said that the fare for the round trip would be $5.

Gen. Spinola wanted to go in plain Democratic fashion. He saw no necessity for a special train or a band, inasmuch, he said, as Tammany would not have any candidates to present to the Convention. Edward T. Wood said that Gen. Spinola was mistaken about Tammany's programme. It expected to name the candidates for Governor, Secretary of State, and the State Trensurer. He favored a special train. Ex-Coroner Waltman opposed the band project. Workers, not blowers, he said, were required in Saratoga.

Register Reilly, Judge Gorman, and W. Bourke Cockran talked anti-band, Judge Duffy said that ten years of convention experience convinced him that a band was useless. Tammany was as strong as ever, and could hold fast without music.

It was resolved to go on a special train, but not to have a band, and to start on Wednesday evening the members wearing badges. A resolution of Judge Gorman's that Tammany's anti-civil service resolutions be laid before the Convention for action was adopted.

TALESMEN FINED $16,000.

A Jury at Last Obtained in the Smith Murder Trial-Opening Testimony.

When the trial in General Sessions of Peter Smith, indicted for murder in the first degree n shooting John Hannon, the night watchman of the corporation dumping pier at the foot of East Thirty-eighth street, on the evening of April 7, was resumed yesterday eight jurymen sat in the jury box. They were the yield of three panels of talesmen of fifty each, and three days were spent in sifting them out of the almost unbroken succession of business men who professed to have conscientious scruples against hanging. Fifty additional talesmen had been summoned by Recorder Smyth. On Tuesday and Wednesday he imposed fines amounting to $12.500 upon the talesmen who did not appear in obedience to the summons. So there was a greatly improved percentage of the newly-summoned talesmen in court. Fourteen, however, did not present themselves, and the Recorder ordered that a fine of $250 be recorded against each delinquent. The jury was flauly completed, and the case was opened with the testimony of half a dezen witnesses. The eyldence was strong against the accused. The trial is unfinished. There never has been known in the history of the county so much difficulty in obtaining a jury, and the fines inflicted are unprecedented. three panels of talesmen of fifty each, and three

The saloou keeper frightened her off. She threw the babies into the hallway of 529 East Twelfth street. She was running away when a policeman arrested her. Mrs. McGuirk was too drunk to give any explanation of her reasons for trying to about on the rehildren. In her pockets was found a twenty-four-hour pass dated yesterday from the Randai's leiand infant Asylum. She was locked up in the Fifth street stained and Matron Webb took care of the twing, who were clean and neatly dressed.

A Decree by the Pope. BALTIMORE, Sept. 17 .- A decree by Pope Leo BALTIMORE, Sopt. 17.—A decree by Pope Leo XIII. has been received by Archbishop Gibbons. His Holiness renews his encyclical "Supreme Apostelatus" of 1883, concerning the celebration during October of the Rosary. The Pope decrees and commands that the regulations contained therein be observed in all Catholic churches this year and in subsequent years, "so long as the present distressing state of the Church and of public affairs continues, and so long as it is not granted to the Church to return thanks for the restoration to the Supreme Pontif of his full liberty." Copies of this decree have been sent out from this see to all Catholic churches.

CHARGES AGAINST BACON.

YET THE ETONIANS WILL MAKE HIS REMOVAL A TEST ISSUE.

Committee Will Give the President s Talking to-Fault also Found Bed Mr. Kanpp is a Brother-in-Law.

The Eaton reformers said yesterday that they would make a civil service test issue on the appointment by Collector Hedden of his brother-in-law, Josiah S. Knapp, as Assistant Auditor at $3,500 a year, and George H. Sterling as Custom House Weigher at $2,500 a year. They charge that they did not undergo a competitive examination, as required by the civil service rules. One was appointed for personal reasons and the other for political purposes to help the canvass of a certain Democratic candidate for the nomination for Governor. The Collector's brother-in-law was advanced over the head of John M. Coyne, the Chief Clerk of the Auditor's division, who was in the direct line of promotion.

The Civil Service Reform Association, George W. Curtis Chairman, met in the rooms of the Academy of Medicine, and censured Collector Hedden, Acting Collector Berry, and Surveyor Beattle for appointing Knapp and Sterling without a civil service examination. They said that there was an evident attempt to drag the Custom House into politics. Lawyer George D. Sheppard of the Brooklyn Young Men's Domocratic Club and Everett P. Wheeler were delegated to go to Washington and bring the cases of Knapp and Sterling personally to the attention of the President. Mr. Sheppard and Mr. Wheeler belong to the association and are Democrats.

cases of Knapp and Sterling personally to the attention of the President. Mr. Sheppard and Mr. Wheeler belong to the association and are Democrats.

Collector Hedden, Acting Collector Berry, and a lawyer called at the United States District Attorney's office and presented to Assistant S. B. Clarke, in the absence of the District Attorney, charges against Weigher Bacon, who was removed on Tuesday. Mr. Hedden said that the charges did not personally affect the integrity of Mr. Bacon, but related to gross irregularities in the management of his weighing district. He submitted one affidavit, but declined to say what it contained. Mr. Berry said that two affidavits were submitted, and that they contained allegations against assistants of Mr. Bacon, and that Mr. Bacon was also involved. The matter is to be laid before the Grand Jury.

The Weighers who remain undisturbed by the Collector are Samuel G. Acton. Edward Jardine, and George H. Shirley. All three have been active Republican nartisans and officeholders of long tenure. One of them, it is said, in giving out work, favors laborers who live in tenements that he owns in Jersey City. Another got his son to chalk figures on the soles of his shoes when he was a candidate for a Custom House place, so that he could say, when asked his age, that he was over 21.

The civil service reformers are chagrined at the treatment of John Callister, a watchman in the Post Office building, who was crippled by the fall of the walls of the building some years ago. His removal was recently demanded of the custodian, and when told how he had been crippled the applicants replied that they did not care if the entire Post Office had fallen on him, they wanted his office for McIllhurgy of the Third district. The removal was made. United States District Attorney Dorsheimer went to Washington yesterday to obtain from the President further instructions about defending the Civil Service Commissioners in the quo warranto proceedings begun against them

A FUGITIVE BALLOON.

Descending on a Church and Demolishing the Chimneys-Its Occupant Missing. MONMOUTH, Ill., Sept. 17 .- At about 2 o'clock this afternoon there appeared in the restern sky a small black spot, that gradually increased in size as it approached this city. It was eagerly watched by an excited throng that quickly gathered on the streets. When first seen it was moving in a northeasterly direction. It then changed its course to the southeasterly, and when within two miles of here again floated toward the northeast. It finally descended rapidly and struck an old church nearly half the roof. Hundreds of persons were soon on the spot, and the halloon, for such it was, was easily captured. What romained of the gas escaped through a large rent in the cloth. The limb of a tree and the cuff and sleeve of a man's shirt were found entangled in the network of the balloon. Those who first saw the air ship thought that they could see a man clinging to it, and that he dropped into the woods near hore. Search was made, but no traces of the man have been found. The balloon is believed to be the one advertised to ascend from the Burlington. Iowa, fair grounds to-day, in which a bridal couple were to be married. nearly half the roof. Hundreds of persons were Grant and others, that the outstanding note of Batchellers for and others, that the outstanding note of Batchellers for $10,000 was a valid one in the hands of the receiver, and that Batcheller owed that sun to the firm of Grant & Ward. But, as Grant & Ward had converted his securities, they were indebted to him for $35 a share of 12s Farwell stock repleded by them, $25 a share for 2s shares of Farwell stock sold Oct. 1, 1871, and $30 a share for 100 Evening Star shares sold March 1, 1881, with interest upon these several sums. The referre fluds that Batcheller owes the $10,000 note, with interest, and that he is entitled to have that note delivered up to him cancelled, and to be credited in addition with the difference between that note and interest upon it and the sum of $27,500 and interest, the last-institutional sum being the amount which the referre fluds Batcheller to be entitled to a time amount of damages for the improper conversion by Grant 2 Ward of his securities.

Another Chance for Buddenslek. Judge Van Brunt gave his decision yesterday npon the application made for a stay pending Builder Charles A. Buddensiek's appeal from his conviction in the Court of General Seasions. The application was for a certificate under section 527 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which would operate as a stay, if, in the Procedure, which would operate as a stay, if, in the Court's opinion, there was reasonable doubt whether the judgment should stand, because of errors committed upon the trial. Judge Van Brunt holds that under the decisions, if the Judge to whom the application is made comes to the conclusion that the appeal is not frivious, and that there are questions involved which it is proper that the prisoner should have the right to submit to the appealists court, he is bound to grant the certificate. He considered that the appeal was not frivolous, and granted the motion for the certificate.
